

To

P. J. K. L

For the Soul of Mankind:

The United States, the Soviet Union, and the Cold War

By

Melvyn P. Leffler

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements

Introduction

Chapter I: Stalin, Truman, and the Origins of the Cold War, 1945-1948

Stalin, 1-12

World War II, the Soviet Union, and Stalin, 12-32

Truman, 33-46

Stalin and Truman, 46-56

International Anarchy, 56-71

Domestic Politics, 71-78

Allies and Clients, 78-83

Ideology, Personality, and the International System, 83-89

Notes

Chapter II: Malenkov, Eisenhower, and the “Chance for Peace,” 1953-54

Stalin’s Death, 1-13

Eisenhower’s Response, 13-37

Turmoil in the Kremlin, 37-49

A Chance for Peace? 49-69

Arms Control, Germany, and Indochina, 69-82

Fear and Power, 82-85

Notes

Chapter III: Khrushchev, Kennedy, and Johnson, 1962-65: Retreat from Armageddon

At the Brink, 1-8

Khrushchev's Retreat from Armageddon, 8-29

Kennedy Bides His Time, 28-35

Give Peace A Chance, 35-52

Starting Anew and Ending Abruptly, 52-64

Johnson's Agonies and Choices, 65-91

From Armageddon to Cold War, 91-104

Notes

Chapter IV: Brezhnev, Carter, and the Erosion of Détente, 1975-1980

Brezhnev and Détente, 1-35

A New Face in Washington and an Old One in Moscow, 35-53

Wrestling with Détente: Hegemons, Clients, and Allies, 53-71

The China Card and the Fate of Détente, 71-85

Afghanistan and Iran, 85-100

The Vienna Summit, 100-110

Nicaragua and Afghanistan, 110-132

The End of Détente, 132-136

Notes

Chapter V: Reagan Gorbachev, and the End of the Cold War, 1985-1990

Ronald Reagan's Morning in America, 2-38

Mikhail Gorbachev's Twilight in Moscow, 38-50

Gorbachev, Reagan, and Arms Reductions, 51-89

Afghanistan: the Troops Come Out, 89-104

New Thinking, Old Thinking, 104-120

Eastern Europe: The Wall Comes Down, 120-134

Germany: Two Countries Become One, 134-148

Gorbachev, Reagan, and Bush, 148-150

Notes

Conclusion

Bibliography